COVID-19 Emergency Declaration Blanket Waivers for Health Care Providers

Summary of CMS Waivers for Nursing Homes

On March 28, 2020, CMS announced that numerous waivers of federal regulations are now in effect, retroactive to March 1, 2020, and lasting through the end of the emergency declaration. These are “blanket” waivers, which means that no request or notification of CMS is required. The waivers apply to many different provider types. The purpose of this summary is to identify key nursing home-related waivers. Note: These waivers do not apply to state nursing home regulations, which remain in effect unless states take their own action.

<td>Transfer/discharge between facilities for purposes of separating and cohorting residents who are COVID+, COVID- and those of uncertain status</td>
<td>Notice of transfer/discharge can be provided as soon as practicable instead of before the transfer/discharge.</td>
<td>This waiver ONLY applies to the following types of transfers or discharges and ONLY if the receiving facility agrees to accept each specific resident (confirmation of acceptance can be verbal - with documentation by transferring facility - or written): 1. Transferring residents with symptoms or confirmed diagnosis of COVID-19 to COVID-19 only facility 2. Transferring residents without symptoms or a confirmed diagnosis of COVID-19 to a non-COVID-19 facility 3. Transferring residents without symptoms of COVID-19 to a facility for observation of signs/symptoms of COVID-19 over 14 days. If none of these situations applies, the federal nursing home regulations are unchanged. Although the notice does not have to be given prior to the move, advocates should urge providers to: make every effort to give residents as much advance notification as possible; notify families; prepare residents for the move as much as possible; give residents and families an opportunity to ask questions; provide reassurance</td>
</tr>

Transfers within the facility

These transfers now include the transfer of residents by one facility to another facility that has agreed to care for the residents during the emergency. This is referred to as “under arrangements.” It is considered to be a transfer within the facility because the transferring facility is still considered to be the provider and reimburses the other facility for care.

The transferring facility does not have to give a resident notice before moving them to another room in the facility. A resident cannot refuse such a transfer.

This waiver ONLY applies to transfers in a facility to group or cohort residents with COVID-19 or symptoms and separate them from those with no symptoms or confirmed not to have COVID-19.

Advocates should encourage providers to take the steps indicated above.

Bedhold notice

Notice can be given as soon as practicable instead of before and at the time of the transfer.

Some states have extended their bedhold period during this crisis period.

<td>CMS states it is permitting this waiver to help facilities address possible staff shortages. CMS has not waived the requirement that facilities ensure that nurse aides are able to demonstrate competency in skills and techniques necessary to care for residents’ needs.</td>

<td>These requirements are waived ONLY for the purposes of grouping or cohorting residents with symptoms or a diagnosis of COVID-19 and separating them from residents with no symptoms or determined to be</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Resident grouping

The facility does not have to give a resident notice or rationale for changing their roommate or moving them to another room in the facility.

Residents cannot refuse to move to another room (but only if the move is COVID-19 related).

COVID-19 negative. These waivers do not apply under any other circumstances.

Even though these requirements are waived, advocates can still advise nursing homes to give residents as much notice as possible; do the best they can to give residents some choice of roommate; assure residents the move is only temporary; ensure residents’ belongings are transferred with them; and make a special effort to help residents become accustomed to and comfortable in their new room.

Resident groups

Resident groups (councils) cannot meet in-person.

Despite the fact that residents cannot gather in-person, there are many creative ways to keep a resident council going.
