For the resident of a long term care facility, moving, whether back home or to another assisted living facility, can be both exciting and stressful. Careful consideration of options and thorough planning are the best ways to minimize any negative impact of having to relocate. The Wisconsin Board on Aging and Long Term Care is a government agency that works to resolve problems and improve conditions in long term care for the elderly. It encourages the resident and other interested parties to become well-informed and actively involved in discharge planning activities with staff at the facility in order to maintain as much control as possible in the upcoming decisions about where he or she will live. It is beneficial to attend all discharge planning meetings and care conferences that are held on the resident’s behalf. This is an opportunity to express thoughts and preferences for the kinds of care and services the resident will want to receive and in what kinds of settings. At these meetings there should be a discussion of the resident’s current needs for care and support as well as all available options to meet those needs. Either returning home or moving to an assisted living facility in the community might be a possible option. Consider asking about meeting with a representative from the county human services department to explore eligibility for funds and supports to do so. It is important to take advantage of opportunities to visit several different locations to aid in better choosing where the resident will live. This facility can assist with arranging transportation for the resident to revisit his or her home or to tour new facilities under consideration.

An ombudsman with the Wisconsin Board on Aging and Long Term Care is available to answer questions and to lend support throughout this transition. We can provide information about options; about kinds of residential services and settings, about specific care facilities and service providers, and about possible funding sources to help pay for them. We can advise the resident in the exercise of rights and can assist in resolving any concerns and problems that might occur while planning to move.
Some of the potential issues could be:

- Inadequate care and treatment or services to meet needs
- Objections to being told to leave or to a particular proposed future placement setting
- Lack of information, or involvement in discharge planning
- Objections to any part of a discharge plan
- Any abuses or rights violations

Residents of long term care facilities have rights under state and federal law. A list of those rights should have been provided upon admission to this facility and shared again upon entering another care setting. These rights should be made available in writing and in a language and format that is easily understood. The Board on Aging and Long Term Care has a booklet available that is intended to inform the reader of those rights and to assist in exercising them. A copy of that booklet can be provided, at no cost, by contacting an ombudsman. Keep in mind that residents don’t forfeit any of their constitutional rights by living in a nursing home or an assisted living facility.

Ombudsmen advocate for residents aged sixty or over. Please call the Ombudsman program, at (800) 815-0015, if there’s anything we can do to help make the transition go as smoothly as possible.
LEARNING ABOUT OPTIONS

The resident should expect that staff from the facility is available to begin discussions about where it is that he or she might want to live. The social worker or facility manager/administrator may be approached to answer questions or to hear about preferences for alternate living arrangements. The resident is entitled to a discharge planning session and may designate anyone to accompany him or her to these meetings. At the request of the resident or authorized decision-maker, an ombudsman can be contacted to attend and advise the resident at a discharge planning meeting.

Independent arrangements for moving can be made, but the resident is entitled and encouraged to take full advantage of the planning and assistance to be offered by the facility.

Agencies in county governments can be contacted to consult with the resident about residential and other services options. They can usually provide written information about programs and funding sources to help pay for community-based services. These county agencies usually have lists of other facilities and directories of local care providers.
ASSESSMENT OF NEEDS AND PREFERENCES

The resident may request an assessment by the county Human Services department to determine eligibility for receiving public funding and support to safely return home or to move to an assisted living facility. The resident may be approached by someone from the county offering this assessment. A social worker, facility manager/administrator or an ombudsman can be asked to arrange for someone to visit.

Should the resident prefer to move to nursing home, the staff can be asked to call a particular facility to begin their assessment process and to see whether they have any room available and can meet his or her needs. At any time, the assistance of representatives from various state and county agencies can be requested to advise the resident about his or her options.
EXCHANGING INFORMATION ABOUT THE RESIDENT AND ABOUT WHAT HE OR SHE WANTS AND WILL BE NEEDING

When being referred to another facility or care provider, information about the resident’s preferences and any needs for assistance should be provided. There should be notification including a request for authorization, in writing, to release and exchange information. This is done so that the new care provider can prepare to adequately meet the resident’s needs. Exchanging information, early on, between service providers is critical in promoting a smoother transition and better continuity of care. This information should be shared only when the written release form has been signed by the resident or legal representative, and the authorization can be limited or withdrawn at any time.

A document prepared by a nursing home called a discharge summary should have been written and then reviewed at the discharge planning session. This should also be sent on to any new providers. It should include information about the resident’s current medical condition as well as instructions for his or her care. It should summarize the resident’s course of treatment while at the nursing home and identify his or her potential for rehabilitation. Finally, the resident should be provided with a post discharge plan that is meant help him or her adjust to a new living environment. This should include any instructions and referrals for community services when moving home or to a community based setting.
TOURING NEW PLACES

It’s a good to idea to tour and to see a proposed new place to live, first hand.
The facility should arrange transportation so that the resident is provided with opportunities to visit potential alternate living arrangements.
A request can be made that staff accompany the resident on a tour that is arranged at a time that’s convenient for the resident and a friend or family member. He or she has the right to meet with any potential roommate(s) and other residents to ask questions about the place and to see State inspection reports. Advocates can help locate and review inspection reports of licensed facilities. Checklists are available that can help to focus on things to look for or questions to ask when visiting a possible new home. These checklists can be taken from the internet or gotten by asking an Ombudsman to assist in obtaining one.
When returning home or moving to an apartment, the resident is entitled and encouraged to first visit with qualified staff to see that he or she can get around and safely manage.

He or she has the right to meet with any potential roommate(s).
PLANNING FOR THE MOVE

The resident has right to be involved in the planning of a move and to determine where he or she is to live by choosing from among the available alternatives. After having toured, applied for and been accepted, and the resident has approved the placement, the opportunity to select the date for moving should be offered. The resident may move as soon as he or she, and the new care providers are ready, and plans have been finalized. This may include needing to have a service plan approved by state and county agencies if using public funds to return home or to move into an assisted living facility. The move should be on a date that is convenient for the resident and for any persons assisting with the move. The resident is entitled to, at least, thirty days written notice prior to the relocation. The notice should confirm when and to where he or she will move. This written notice should provide information about how to appeal any part of the discharge plan and how to contact an advocate for assistance in doing so. He or she may waive this thirty day waiting period or might want to contact an advocate if feeling pressured into moving before being ready.
The resident is also entitled to a planning session to confirm the details of the move. At least fourteen days before moving, a meeting should be held to develop and discuss a discharge plan that includes counseling on how the nursing home resident, and his or her records and belongings will be moved. Written notice of this meeting should be provided in writing at least seven days in advance of the planning conference. The resident may ask any other person to join him or her at this meeting or can waive it altogether. He or she may choose to move sooner than the planning process allows, and can waive those timelines as well. It’s important, however, that the resident feel well prepared and comfortable about the move, and that all interested parties be informed about and know what to expect of the discharge plan. Please note the addendums in the back of this booklet that include lists of questions to assist in developing and evaluating the quality of the discharge plan.
BELONGINGS AND PROPERTY

The resident has a right to have and to use his or her clothing and other possessions, and to expect that they be safely transported to the new location. It’s recommended that the resident directly supervise the packing of belongings, if able, and that they be inventoried and recorded in writing. This written inventory should accompany the resident to his or her new home. The resident may choose to pack his or her own things or to ask a friend or family to assist, but can also expect help from facility staff, if preferred. While still limited, adequate space for things ought to be provided in the room at the new facility as well as there being some secure storage space for extra possessions. If returning home or moving into a new apartment, the resident should inquire into any available funding to assist with the cost of equipping the new place.

Upon discharge, the resident is entitled to a statement of any funds being held by the closing facility. This statement should show all expenditures, disbursements and deposits made to any account managed by the facility. The resident should decide and dictate how those funds will be transferred at the time of his or her relocation (whether by check given to the resident or a responsible party, or sent directly to the new facility.) Arrangements will need to be made to see that funds and all other business, are routed to the new home. Each agency may need to be contacted separately to let them know that the resident is moving and what his or her new address will be. Some sources of payment or income to consider include a Social Security check, Supplemental Security income (SSI,) Pension funds, Insurance policies, Bank/Credit Union information on certificates of deposit, checking and savings accounts, Trust funds, Stocks, etc. A change of address form should be completed and submitted to the post office, as well as arrangements made for any business to be transferred to the new location. The nursing home social worker or facility manager/administrator can assist with all of this.

The resident is entitled to a statement of any funds being held by the closing facility.
ON THE DAY OF THE MOVE

The resident and interested parties should have already been informed of the specifics of the plan for moving, as to when and how, at the planning session. Belongings should have been packed and inventoried, and should accompany the resident on the move. His or her address should have been changed and instructions should have been submitted for redirecting any business expenses like the telephone or cable bill, etc. A summary of care needs should have been sent ahead to the new care providers. Family and friends, with the resident’s permission, should have been notified as well as the physician as to the new location.

The resident may want to inform staff that he or she would like to take some time to say goodbye to other residents and staff before leaving.

It’s important that everyone involved be mindful of how the resident may be feeling, and any signs or symptoms of illness or change in condition should be promptly reported to current and new staff.
Upon arrival at a new facility, the resident should be shown to and around the new room, introduced to any roommate and offered a tour of the facility. Everyone involved should be alert to potential hazards in a new location and increased lighting should be offered to the resident while acclimating to the new environment. At a minimum, he or she should be informed of the location of the bathroom and where meals are to be taken. It may be helpful to ask about the availability of any programs or activities that might be of interest to the resident and that might provide opportunities for him or her to meet new people. The resident should be given an opportunity to discuss preferences for certain routines such as when he or she likes to rise in the morning and go to bed at night, and for bathing, food preferences, etc. He or she should ask, if not already instructed, about how to alert staff when assistance is needed.

As belongings are being unpacked, items should be checked against the written inventory to see whether anything is missing. The inventory should have been completed as things were packed and should have accompanied the resident. It’s recommended that any lost or damaged belongings be promptly reported to either the social worker or manager at the new facility, or case-manager if the resident is receiving assistance from the county. An ombudsman can be called to help in trying to locate or get missing things replaced.
POST DISCHARGE

The nursing home is required to develop, with the participation of the resident and his or her family, a post-discharge plan of care that is meant to help him or her adjust to the new living arrangement. It’s to be designed to ensure that needs are met, and should be done regardless of whether the resident is returning home, or moving to an assisted living facility or to another nursing home.

The receiving facility, upon the resident’s admission, is required to develop and implement an initial plan of care based on the physician’s plan and orders for care. It should also include approaches to address any new problems identified in a nursing assessment. It’s critical that this plan be thorough and specific enough to meet the needs of the resident immediately upon their arrival at the new home.
PROBLEMS IN THE RESIDENT’S NEW HOME

The resident should feel comfortable asking any question or reporting any problems at the new location. He or she has a right to be listened to and to have concerns responded to in a timely and respectful manner. He or she also has a right to have any complaints addressed without fear of retaliation.

In the new home, the resident should know who to contact to report a problem or concern. He or she may want to ask about the name of the social worker or manager/administrator at the facility and how that person can be reached.

He or she also has a right to have any complaints addressed without fear of retaliation.

Within weeks of admission, the resident should be offered a care-planning session, but may request that one be scheduled at anytime to address a specific care concern or issue. A formal grievance may be filed with any facility or provider, and the agency is required to provide the complainant with their determination. The written findings of their inquiry or investigation, may be requested, and a decision can be appealed. A formal complaint with the regulatory agency having oversight of any licensed program can be filed as well. An ombudsman can be contacted to discuss options for and provide assistance with redressing concerns, filing complaints and seeking appeals.

In a private residence, the names and phone numbers of care providers, the physician, emergency services and for a case or care-manager (where assigned) should be made readily available.
Wisconsin has seen an increase in the number of closing or down-sizing nursing homes. These situations can be even more stressful as the resident may not have much control over the decision to move. When it’s been decided that a facility is to close, it is required by law to inform the State and to submit a plan to the Department of Health and Family Services that describes how it will assist the resident to move safely and with as little stress as possible.

The State will approve the plan or, if unacceptable, ask the facility to revise it. The residents and their families should, then, be invited to an informational meeting with staff from the facility and representatives from state and county agencies as well as from advocacy organizations. The purpose of this meeting would be to formally announce the facility’s plans, and to inform the participants about options and about what kinds of help one can expect. We encourage attendance at this meeting to ask any questions about the closure. This is an opportunity to meet with professionals who can advise and assist the resident in finding another nursing home, or in exploring whether he or she can relocate to an assisted living facility or return to live at home with support. Questions about options can be asked of advocates who can offer their help and support. Arrangements can be made to meet with the social worker at the home to begin making plans to move. There should be much written information at this meeting as well.

An anticipated date for closure should be announced, but the facility has a responsibility to see that each resident moves to a place that can adequately meet his or her care needs. There should be time to learn about options, to have the residents’ needs and preferences assessed, to visit potential alternate living arrangements, and to plan the move. A resident has rights in choosing his or her final destination and may not be forced to remain in any place without a court order. No one should be required to move without first having suitable alternate living arrangements made.

There should be a place at the closing facility designated as a Resource Room where written information including lists of other facilities and local directories of care providers can be obtained. Contact information for people and places that can assist the resident in deciding where to live should also be made available. There are descriptions of a variety of different kinds of long term care facilities and information about public funding to help pay for them that can be made available.

A team of state and county representatives, along with advocates, will regularly meet with the facility to monitor the closure and to discuss the relocation plans of each resident. The resident or authorized decision-maker can contact an ombudsman to represent his or her interest at these meetings. The ombudsman can advise the resident about options and make the facility aware of his or her preferences, and can participate (with the resident’s permission) in any discharge planning activities. An ombudsman can also discuss options for redressing care concerns or complaints about the facility.

In the event of a room change while still at the closing facility, to bring residents closer together for safety reasons, he or she has the right to receive reasonable advanced notice and some accommodation of preferences. He or she also has a right to have personal possessions promptly unpacked and accessible throughout the closure.
IN THE MEANWHILE

All persons involved with a nursing home resident who is relocating should be conscious of the potential impact of the changes in his or her life and allow that person a period of time to adjust, but to also recognize and promote some of the possible positive aspects of moving.

The resident should be included in discussions and listened to at every phase of the relocation process. It should be understood that as options are presented and become clearer that that person may need time to decide and may change his or her mind. Plans must be sufficiently flexible to accommodate the resident. He or she should be made to feel comfortable about asking questions and actively encouraged to voice any opinions and concerns before, during and after move.

He or she should be consulted, and asked to consider and share thoughts on what might be done to make the transition easier and to help him or her feel more at home in the new living environment.

Everyone involved with the relocating resident should be aware of and watch for any indications of stress as a result of this transfer.
The Board on Aging and Long Term Care realizes the complexity of all that’s involved in the relocating of persons living in a long term care facility, and has created this booklet in hopes of improving care and enhancing the quality of life for elderly residents.

We appreciate your taking the time to read it to better understand ways to help minimize the stress to residents having to do so.

Please know that our ombudsmen remain available to help in any way that they can.

PLEASE CALL 1-800-815-0015 to ask any questions or to seek direct assistance in making the best possible discharge plans for elderly residents.

☐ What records, equipment and supplies will be sent to my new care providers?

☐ What chance will I have to work out the final details my plans?

☐ What if I change my mind and don’t want to move there?
QUESTIONS TO ASK WHILE REVIEWING THE DISCHARGE PLAN

Knowing your rights as a resident in a long term care facility can help you make informed decisions about where you will live and who will provide the care you may need. You have the right to be kept informed about options throughout the period of time it takes for you to make plans to relocate from this facility. This should involve several discussions with the staff at the facility that ends in your being invited to participate in a discharge/relocation meeting where your plan is finalized and reviewed with you. It’s another opportunity to ask questions and to be sure that the details of your move have been addressed. You also have the right to ask an ombudsman, your guardian, your family and/or friends to join you at this or any other meeting for support in making sure your preferences are heard and considered. The following list of questions might help you to make sure you get all of the information and assistance that you have a right to receive.

1) Was I given an opportunity to discuss my options and to tell the facility staff about where it is I’d like to live?

2) Did I receive enough information about services and supports available to me? Was this information clear and easy to understand?

3) Was I offered an opportunity to meet with my county agency to discuss community living options?
4) Did anyone offer me an assessment for funding to return home or to move to an assisted living facility?

5) Was I informed of the outcome of that assessment and do I feel that it accurately described my condition? If not, was I advised on any appeal rights?

6) Has the facility made arrangements for me to visit possible places to live? Has anyone followed up with me on the results of that visit? Was I given an opportunity to ask questions about any of these places?

7) Was I given an opportunity to decide whether I’d like to move to one of these places?

8) Once I had decided on a location and my arrangements were made, was I offered a discharge planning conference?

9) Did I receive a written notice informing me about the date, time, location and agenda of the discharge / relocation meeting?
10) Was I given the chance to change the date and/or time of the meeting if it wasn’t convenient for me or my representative?

11) Was sufficient notice of my discharge / relocation planning meeting provided?

12) Did the facility inform me that I have the right to have an ombudsman or another person present to help me voice my preferences at this meeting?

13) Was there enough time scheduled at this meeting for me to discuss all of the things that are important to me?

14) Did I receive a written summary about what was discussed at my discharge / relocation meeting?

15) Was I given a written notice at least thirty days before the date I anticipate moving? Did it identify when and to where I’m expected to move?

16) Do I know how my belongings will be taken to my new home?

17) Do I know who to talk to at the facility if I have questions or concerns about my discharge / relocation plan?
If you’d like help in developing or do not agree with the discharge plan already developed by the facility, you have the right to appeal the decision. You may seek assistance in making your plan or with an appeal by contacting an ombudsman at:

Ombudsman
(OM-BUDZ-MAN)

The word Ombudsman is Scandinavian. In this country the word has come to mean an advocate or helper. An Ombudsman protects and promotes the rights of long-term care consumers, working with residents and families to achieve quality care and quality of life. The program is required by both federal and state law. In Wisconsin the Board on Aging and Long Term Care operates the program statewide.
